

Many anime fans struggle to decide what to watch next because the current platforms and recommendations rely on generic metrics rather than individual personalization. This leads to wasted time, frustration, and less enjoyment. A recommendation tool that looks at the user's watch history, preferred genres, and mood could provide smarter more accurate suggestions for the user's next watch.